Title: Tale of the Tapestry of Souls

Author: Garmon

Entered: 11/13/1999
Subject: Unexplained

Long long ago, in a
land long since turned
to rubble and dust,
there dwelt a young
maidenfair, who gave her heart to a powerful mage. She fell deeply in love and married thelad. But he was a sinister soul who
deceived the young
weaver girl. He was upto no good as he
planned to lay waste to the land. And he had the power and
themeans to do so as well.

The young lass found
out his plans but she loved him to much to do him in but she
wasraised in the virtues
and would not let him
destroy all that she loved. So she wentto
the village elders the
wise ones and asked
em what to do. They told her to useall her skill and weave a
tapestry using her pure
soul virtues and blood

and sacred words.
They told her to fast
and then to
use all her skill and
embue EVERY THREAD with all the
magic she possessed
and with it shecould
trap the soul of the evil mage and spare her
land. There was a price to bepaid for as she put
would her soul be required.

The young maid
thought that this price
she started right to work. She prepared
herself, and with her
great skill, sacred
words, her pure
soul,virtue, and her very blood she wove a tapestry that would trap souls. Then she
luredher husband to
the woods, and in the light of the full moon
said the words used in thetapestry`s making
and trapped the man`s soul. She stood there a minute and her form
shimmered and
disappeared.

She saved her land but sentenced herself as well to the tapestry that she made. Theysay it still turns up from time to time. It has taken on a will of it`s own
andtravels the land
capturing or releasing
souls However as old

as it may be it`s pattern
andcolors never dull
taking on the likeness
of the souls it holds
within.
